VOLUME XXXVII

SCENE WELL-KNOWN TO OXFORD COUNTY PEOPLE.

The Sixty-fourth exhibition of the time honored Oxford County Agricultural Society is almost here. Sept. 18-20 are the dates for the great show on the grounds between Norway and South Paris. Every absent son and daughter of old Oxford hills are invited to come and bring their neighbors.

Norway Lake School Reunion.

The heat of last Wednesday, did not exceed the energy and enthusiasm of the good people of "Frost Corner," who planned and carried out an entirely successful reunion on that day.

The grove committee for the third annual reunion of the Norway Lake school was composed of Messrs. W. S. Partridge, Charles Knight, Maud Wood and Edith Boober had secured, and served at high noon a dinner such as we dream of about Thanksgiving time. Tables groaned under loads of edibles such as only Norway's famous cooks can serve, and it is a fact noted by the scribes, that Ira Wood had to brace and stay up the tables as the women spread the feast. Surely a hundred sat at the "first tables," and as many more quickly took their places when vacated.

Among visitors from other towns we saw:

W. Clarence Mallett of Rochester, N. H., Z. M. Mansur, Esq., formerly Lieutenant Governor of Vermont, and Mrs. Ellen Newhall Mansur of Newbury, Vt.

Charles Bartlett of Auburn.

Miss E. Titcomb and Mrs. Hattie Young Titcomb of Pelham, N. H.

Mrs. F. E. Harriman with her daughters, Pearl and Chrystal, of Oxford, and Hazel Harriman of Auburn.

Charles F. Partridge and Mrs. Josephine C. Partridge of Rochester, N. Y.

Leola Noyes of Lovell.

Gay Estlin of Watford.

Sadie E. Whittier and Mabel Dudley of Medford, Mass.

Miss M. Clayton of Portland.

Mary L. Murray and Mrs. I. A. Sawyer of Somerville, Mass.

Miss Rae E. Chapman of Boston.

Guy Swift, Carrie A. Gray and Mrs. Ellen Wood of Maine.

Mrs. Edith Parsons of Gloucester.

Fred Bolster and Mrs. Edith Lovewell of Harrison.

And others who came back to renew old acquaintances and make new ones.

Of our own town, former pupils, prospective pupils, and teachers, they came by the dozen, in all sorts of conveyances, except by Norway's Western trolley.

Babies in arms and Norway's two best boys, Deacon Oswood Perry and William French, aged 82 and 81 years respectively.

After dinner, in the grove, the company was called to order by the president, Frank H. Noyes, who expressed in a few choice words, the old school's cordial welcome. Prayer was offered by William French. The secretary, Frances Partridge, read the report of last year; the treasurer, J. L. Partridge gave a public account of the funds in his hands and the expenditures. Wm. O. Perry reported as necrologist, eulogizing the ten, who have in a twelve-month, joined the great school of the hereafter.

Letters of regret and congratulation were read by the secretary, one very interesting letter being from Sile Buhanham, who learned ball playing at Frost Corner and banking in Lincoln, Nebraska.

Elen Brown sang two solos. The Hon. John A. Roberts delivered a thoughtful address on "The Passing of the Deedrick School."

The superintendent gracefully relinquished his place on the program to those whose reminiscences we had gathered to hear, and some of the speakers were Z. M. Mansur, esq., Clarence Mallett, Charles Bartlett, Mrs. Hattie Y. Titcomb and Mrs. Edith Harriman.

After electing officers for the year, joining in a farewell song, and voting the third reunion an unqualified success, the people casually dispersed and left the pine of the school lot whispering together of this one of the happiest days since they shaded the dear old spot.

Harriman and several others who are guests at the Thompson cottage were present. Mrs. Blake received many beautiful flowers and other presents.

Mrs. Mary A. Williams of Atlanta, Ga., is visiting her sister, Mrs. George E. Horr, Winter street, and Mrs. E. E. Abbott of St. John, N. Clark-Hobbs.

On Sunday, August 19th, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Hobbs at 73 Main street, Norway, occurred the marriage of their only daughter, Fanny Greenleaf, to Albert Lawrence Clark of the same village. Although it was a very quiet family wedding, it was nevertheless a delightful and especially pretty event.

Promptly at 6 o'clock p. m. the contracting parties entered the room where the ceremony was to take place and which was tastefully decorated with beautiful cut flowers for the occasion. The bride was attractively gowned in a pretty white muslin with pinks attached in a becoming manner to both gown and hair. Rev. C. A. Brooks of the Methodist Episcopal church officiated, using a service which he has compiled from the manuals of various church authorities. Mr. and Mrs. Clark were united with the single ring.

Miss Hobbs is one of the most highly respected and well known young ladies of this community. She graduated from the Norway High School class of 1901. Since that time she has been a familiar and welcome figure in the large Variety Store on Main street, where for many years her father, George W. Hobbs, has carried on a thriving business, and where the unfailing courtesy and genial personality of Miss Hobbs have won and retained for her a host of friends. The groom, Albert L. Clark, is a native of South Paris and is now a junior member of the South Paris High School. After completing his course in the high school Mr. Clark attended the Brooklyn College of Pharmacy in Brooklyn, New York. For several years he has been employed in the Shurtlett drug store of South Paris and is now a junior member of the firm, E. A. Shurtlett & Co. A gentleman of staunch integrity and attractive personality, Mr. Clark commands the friendship and esteem of all those who are most intimately acquainted with him. The only guest outside the immediate families of the bride and groom was Edna I. Brown, an intimate friend and classmate of the bride.

A goodly number of useful and valuable gifts attested the tributes of numerous friends. A beautiful gold bracelet was presented to Mrs. Clark by the groom and a valuable clock was presented to the couple by the clerk of friends of Mr. Clark in South Paris.

The newly wed couple took the early morning train for Old Orchard, where the honeymoon will be spent. On their return they will live for the present at the home of the bride.

The heartiest congratulations of both old and new Norway and South Paris will follow Mr. and Mrs. Clark to their seaside home and to all future walks of life.

Sherman E. Pike's Moving Pictures.

Sherman E. Pike's moving pictures which recently exhibited here returned to Norway on Tuesday and Wednesday and presented an entirely new program. Several illustrated songs are included in the program and are sung in a pleasing manner by Harry Downing of New York. One new song which has recently been secured by Mr. Pike is "Since Nellie Went Away." Words and music by Herbert H. Taylor. This is a fine song and received a full hall when presented on Tuesday evening.

An interesting series of pictures "The River Pirates," showing the pirates going to the house and securing the valuables and making off with them and finally the pirates capture. All the pictures are very good and include some comic series that bring down the house. These pictures will exhibit in Oxford this Friday evening.

Gorton's Minstrels.

Gorton's Minstrels, with everything new, will be the attraction at Norway Opera House, Saturday evening, Aug. 25th. Prominent among notable performers are the premieres of comedy, Jake Kane, the Ventriloquist, offers one of the most unique and novel acts of this kind ever presented on the Minstrel stage.

Mr. Kane in connection with other innovations, introduces a number of Mechanical Walking Figures, among which are the "Mischievous Irishman," "Old Black Joe," singer of plantation melodies, "The Noisy Parrot" and an extremely funny final, entitled "The Telephone."

"The Military Inventor" is a very funny skit which keeps the audience in a continual roar of laughter during its presentation.

Remember the Grand Street Parade and Band Concert at noon.

The program is furnished by 25 clever artists and is guaranteed to be a sure cure for the blues. Elegant special scenery is carried by the company. Usual prices. Get your seats early. Seats on sale at Stone's.

J. Hambo of Jamaica, Plains, Mass., is spending his vacation in Norway, the guest of Dr. A. D. Parmenter.

Frank A. Eastman, the irrepressible, sought out and destroyed the much talked about Burdock Alley. He borrowed a scythe and snath and mowed the luxuriant crop of burdock and weeds that grew on the wretched, stinking alley. It was a pleasant theme to write about and the small boys of much amusement. Why did he do it? Burdock Alley is at the easterly end of the Opera House.

Class Reunion, N. H. S. 1890.

A large number of of N. H. S. '90 met at Freeland Howe's cottage, Lake Pennessesseewassee, Aug. 21, for a class reunion. With wives, husbands and sweethearts there were 22 who gathered around an extraordinarily festive board spread on the lawn. There was such an abundance of food that one man, after eating all he could stuff, gave up in despair, saying, "It's no use, we can never eat all this." Every cake that was tested was pronounced "the best," and the women of '90 were voted excellent cooks. The Class History by Freeland Howe, Jr. was read and caused much merry comment by its interesting review of old times, and the philosophy set forth by the boy of 16. Sound logic was there, too, in this philosophy.

The class prophecy written by Berta Whittier Gammon, was read by Carrie Tucker. This dear girl has long since passed to her reward, but her words live after her with loving memory. Few prophecies are written now-a-days with such remarkable brilliancy as was this one. As the prophecy was read, our minds were saddened by the memory of the departed ones, and silent tributes were paid to those who have gone over the river.

A beautiful old glass berry dish was presented by the class to Mrs. and Mrs. Freeland Howe, Jr., as a wedding gift.

A telegram was received and read by Freeland, expressing the good wishes of Lillie Hazelton Tutthill, her husband and four little girls.

The class were especially glad to have with them Arthur Woodsum, who came from Portsmouth especially for the reunion. Old-time songs were sung, music played, and stories and jokes re-told till all too soon the merry hours sped away, and the whistle of the steamer Pennessesseewassee called us for the homeward trip. It is several years since '90 held a reunion, and we hope the spirit has revived sufficiently to hold a reunion each year hereafter.

List of those present:

DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY

Breaks no Hearts, Excuses
no Crimes.

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race, where it cannot help, it does not harm. It is composed of vegetable ingredients and does not heat or inflame the blood but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Biliousness, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and the delicate delicacies which afflict women, the action of Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this, in letters to Dr. Kennedy, and with a warm and fullness of words which mere medicine certificates never possess. It makes no drunkards—excuses no crimes—breaks no hearts. In its coming there is hope, and in its wings there is healing. We challenge a trial and are confident of the result. Your druggist has it, ONE POLAR BOTTLE. Bear in mind the name and address: Dr. David KENNEDY, Remont, New York.

well as could be expected. He had an operation performed while she was there in Lynn.

Mrs. Etta Cole, formerly of Conway, lately spent a night with Mrs. Mills.
Her boys, Frankie and Tommy, spent the night with their cousins, Ivory and Hazel Cole.

Mrs. Edgar Peavey of Belfast was lately in the place and called on friends.
She taught school here for two years so has many friends here. Her husband and mother, Mrs. Yeaton of Conway,
and a lady cousin from Kansas City,
Missouri, were with her.

On the 10th, Ralph Reed and his mother, Mrs. John Reed, of Swampscott,
Mass., spent the day with their cousins,
John, Henry and Lydia Wiley. As Mr.
Reed is 85 years old and very lame, it was a surprise as well as a pleasure to her cousins to see her. They were boarding at the Mount Mountain House, North Conway. Her cousins would have been glad to have had a longer visit. Mrs.
J. Weeks and daughter, Ora, of Lynn,
their friends, came with them.

The English Reformation Principles to be Presented by Professor Kinsman.

Rev. F. J. Kinsman, M. A., professor of ecclesiastical history in the General Theological Seminary, New York, will lecture at Christ Church on Paris street,
the Norway mission of the Protestant Episcopal church, Friday evening, the 24th inst, being St. Bartholemew's Day, on "The Principles of the English Reformation."

Mr. Kinsman is summing at his beautiful cottage on the slopes of Mt.
Christopher, overlooking Bryant's Pond.
He leaves the woods to lecture here, at the urgent request of Mr. Garfield, who,
as a former pupil of his, knows Prof.
Kinsman's thorough familiarity with his subject, and his impartial and illuminating way of presenting it.

The lecture will take an important place in the evening prayer, which will begin punctually at 7.30.

Magnificent Cars on Grand Trunk.

The Tourist Traffic over the Grand Trunk System to the "Highlands of Ontario" is larger than in any other part of Canada, and each year for several years past the Company have been improving their road-bed, relaying the tracks with 30 pound rails, and augmenting their equipment with modern and luxurious coaches, dining cars and parlor cars, until their present trains are among the finest on the continent. The latest additions placed on this division of the line
are a series of Buffet-Parlor Cars, built specially in the Montreal shops for this traffic. They are models of elegance, both in their exterior and interior finish.
Eighty-one feet long, they contain a parlor with seating capacity for 29 passengers, a smoking-room with seats for people, and in addition an exceptionally large buffet is provided for serving meals in the parlor section of the car.

The inside finish of the car is carried out in a handsome design of mahogany with antique bronze trimmings, while the upholstery is done with green star plush and the ceiling of the car painted green with gold ornamentation, the result achieved being a happy blending of color and a pleasing harmony throughout. The lighting fixtures are combination fixtures for gas and electricity.
Handsome Wilton carpets of choice design cover the parlor and ladies' dressing-room, and rubber-tilling the smoking-room, buffet and passages. The cars are equipped with six-wheeled trucks, Westinghouse high speed brakes, air
signals, and other modern appliances.
They are the standard Grand Trunk color (bottle green) and weigh 118,000 lbs.
each.

Anglers Superstitions.

Old Signs Believed to Be True and Which the Fishermen Heed with the Greatest of Care.

Possibly because fishes are the least
known and understood of living things preyed upon by man, anglers are the most superstitious of sportsmen. Notwithstanding the fact that the fishing fraternity includes some of the most intellectual of men, it is safe to assert that there is not one, be he scientist, professor, minister or statesman, who does not cherish a belief in one, or more pet omens, signs or theories, having no foundation in fact.

"Swear not," quoth Izaak Walton, as long ago as 1670, "lest you catch no fish." The same saying, modernized into "Don't curse, or the fish won't bite," restrains the exasperated expletives of many an angler to-day. The otherwise astute Uncle Izaak was full of quaint and comical ideas about the life and habits of fishes, part of which he inherited from anglers of a still earlier day. He believed that the species pickered had no birth such as is common to other fishes, but evolved from a fungus deposit on flags and reeds growing in water. He quoted Pliny as an authority who averred that fishes have a well developed sense of hearing and could be taught to answer to their names.

The argument among anglers as to whether or not fishes can hear has continued since the days of the ancient Romans, and is still unsettled, even among scientists. A majority of students now affirm that the inhabitants of the waters
can hear no sound originating outside the element in which they live, but this effects not a whit the thousands of Sab-bathmen who insist that no one shall whistle or converse in a tone above a whisper while fishing. When the wind blows it is the wind that blows the bait in fishes' mouths has been a saying impli-cantly believed, for centuries, without it having had originality, or since, any real foundation.

"If you be an honest angler, may the east wind never blow when you go fishing," said Izaak Walton, and as the south wind has been considered particularly favorable to catching fish, so is the eastern breeze regarded as peculiarly bad. Doubtless the saws had their origin in the fact that fair weather usually obtains when the wind is in the south
and it is, therefore, a better time to fish;
while stormy, raw and unpleasant weather
usually accompanies an east wind. Fishes are undoubtedly affected by changes in weather and temperature,
but they care not a jot from which quarter the breeze comes, just so there is a breeze. For fishes dearly love a breeze and the consequent lively ripple upon the surface of the water.

A sultry morning, when the air is still and oppressive, a body of water no matter how densely populated by fish lies still and unbroken. After dawn breaks and the "sunrise breeze" strikes
the water, the fishes that have lain sluggish on the depths arouse themselves, rush to the surface and tumble about in the ripples of an abandonment of spirit.
"When the dogwood blooms in the spring the fishing season has come" is a saw universally credited. Many a small boy, restraining with difficulty his springtime impatience, waits for the whooops of glee the first white blossom of the dogwood tree in the pasture. It is scarcely worth while to remark that the "scaly denizen of the deep" is not in botany, and could by no possibility be influenced by the advance of any particular species of vegetation, especially a highland tree.

There is a class of anglers who swallow with singular avidity any statement concerning fishes if it has a semi-scientific flavor. Such are these have acquired an amusing doctrine concerning the influence of the moon upon fishes and regulate their piscatorial excursions according to Luna's phases. The sign of the Zodiac believed to be the most favorable to good sport with the rod is the sign of Pisces, or the twin fishes, into which the moon passes for two or more days each month. The anglers who are students of the almanac watch this phase, and with the exultant announcement that "the sign is right," bid
them to the riverside, confident of success.

Many anglers who scoff at the dogwood saying express conviction that fishes are peculiarly susceptible to the flavor of sassafras, and many an angler surprisingly fastens a bit of that shrub in the stream above where he is fishing, imagining that its flavor will be carried down with the current and stimulate the appetite of fishes in his vicinity.

There is a minute water beetle, black,
energetic and exultant, that frequents
in droves the still cooves of waterways.
This insect is commonly known to the small boy as the "lucky bug," and he is firmly convinced that the approach of one of these to his float or "bobber" is a sure sign of a "bite" soon to come.
And the belief is not confined exclusiv-
ly to the small boy.

Another frequenter of the waterways and marshes, the magpie, flying down to young America as the "snake doctor,"
is supposed to be the harbinger of ill fortune. If one of these persists in alighting upon the listless "bobber," as they sometimes do, the urchin sadly winds up his line and goes home, as he takes it for granted that no fish are about.

Opinion among anglers is divided concerning Sabbath observance among fish.
There are those who contend that fishes bite particularly well on Sunday, while others, not otherwise deterred by religious scruples, never go a fishing on that day because they are sure the sport will be slow.

What angler, driven to despair by the indifference of the fishes that obstinately refuse to be hooked, has not resorted to the last and universal expedient of spitting on the bait? This is the forlorn hope of the angler.

The idea of providing draft horses
with new hats to "protect the animals from the direct rays of the sun during warm weather has developed into a movement to furnish the nags with trousers to protect their legs from flies and mosquitoes. Perhaps in a few years horses will be thus equipped and begeth for indecent exposure, and while ordinary draft horses will wear
overall, the high-stepping carriage horses of the wealthy will appear in white duck, properly creased to prevent bagging at the knees, of course, and in one course of time we may expect that Maine cows will wear peek-a-boos waists in pleasant weather and rain-coats when it storms.

horse power gasoline engine with wood sawing rig, threshing separator and

SUMMER CATARRH.

Hot Weather Seems to Have a Bad
Effect Upon Some People.

It is generally recognized by physicians that many people suffer more with catarrh during the summer than in the winter. The hot, dry weather and the change from the hot days to cool nights seems to have a bad effect upon the disease.

Even after the usual methods of treating catarrh have been unsuccessful, Noyes Drug Store guarantee that they will refund the money if Hyomel fails to cure the disease. This seems so fair and reasonable that it should induce all catarrh sufferers to take the treatment.
In many instances Hyomel has cured catarrh when the patient has suffered since childhood. Quite a number of people in Norway, who for years have been unable to get a good night's sleep
on account of the disagreeable tickling
and dropping at the back of the throat,
have obtained quick relief from a few treatments of Hyomel and the continued use has made a complete and lasting cure.

There is no stomach dosing when one uses Hyomel. Simply breathe its medicated air through the pocket inhaler that comes in every outfit and all germs will be killed and the mucous membrane will be healed.

The complete outfit costs $1.00, extra bottle, 50c. Remember that if Hyomel does not cure, Noyes Drug Store will return your money.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

How to Save by Judicious and Economical Buying.

Careful purchasing of household necessities is one half the secret of economy, while careful use of the article bought is the other half. Economy in buying consists in the perfect adaptation of the purchase to the purse and needs of the family.

First.—The article should be worth the amount asked for it—that is, its intrinsic value should be such that, as prices average, you are getting the full worth of your money. If it is an article for the table it should be in good condition to use and of good weight and measure. Nothing is worth buying at all that is half spoiled or that will not wear well in proportion to its cost. If for personal or household purposes, its quality should be the best to be obtained for the price.

Second.—The article should supply a genuine need. The need may not be immediate, but it should be both possible and probable. Many things can be purchased by watching the sales between seasons, when rather than keep them over the shopkeepers are willing to sell even below cost. But only standard goods should be bought this way. Many persons have a mania for buying everything they see that is cheap, and then perhaps they never use it. Food, clothing and household articles are often accumulated without regard to quantity, and then changing fashion makes them worthless, this being especially so with ornamental things. Buy of such only what you actually need.

In purchasing for the table a list should be made out the night before and looked over the next morning. In buying groceries a list is indispensable if one would buy cheaply—have just enough and do not forget at the critical moment just how much is really required.

And when one does not go to market every day, and few do, a few minutes spent in seeing how much is on hand that can be used and a short menu of the meals of the next two or three days made in the morning, for in this way a lot of perishable stuff would not be ordered, but, say, a roast, with possibilities of cold meat and rissoles or stew, or some other piece of meat that can be utilized in several ways, and vegetables which will keep at least three days. One can easily learn to market for three and four days at a time, and thus one saves time and money. In buying a roast of beef insist that the bones cut off from your meat be given you, and get a couple of these joints of beef and one of veal at the same time. These make the best stock, and from that hundreds of different things, all good and wholesome, can be made, and if you go to buy them alone you have to pay much more than if you purchased a large joint besides. Often a butcher will throw in one or two knuckles where a leg of lamb or some other rather expensive piece has been taken.

It is in quality, good judgment and in buying only what is needed, and that after reflection at home, that the good housekeeper is known and in which true economy consists.

SOUTH PARIS.

Base Ball.

I. O. O. F. 9; K. of P. 6.

Those who missed the game between the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias at the high school grounds, at South Paris, Saturday afternoon, missed one of the best times of a lifetime. The course there was all kinds of playing, but on the whole it was a much better played game than anyone expected to see.

It was rather supposed that the Knights would win as they had more regular ball players, but the old-timers on the Odd Fellows' team put in some good work. The principal strength of the Odd Fellows' team was in their battery, Webber and Allen both doing fine work in the field and at the bat. Kimball, Baldwin and Aldrich also did good work, Aldrich making a home run in the eighth inning.

Wheeler worked the first seven innings for the Knights and did well. C. Shaw was the next pitcher for them and the Odd Fellows found him easier to hit. The next pitcher for the Knights was H. Shaw, who came in to pitch with two men on bases and one out, in the tenth. He passed the first man but struck out the next two.

SOUTH PARIS.

Base Ball.

I. O. O. F. 9; K. of P. 6.

Those who missed the game between the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias at the high school grounds, at South Paris, Saturday afternoon, missed one of the best times of a lifetime. The course there was all kinds of playing, but on the whole it was a much better played game than anyone expected to see.

It was rather supposed that the Knights would win as they had more regular ball players, but the old-timers on the Odd Fellows' team put in some good work. The principal strength of the Odd Fellows' team was in their battery, Webber and Allen both doing fine work in the field and at the bat. Kimball, Baldwin and Aldrich also did good work, Aldrich making a home run in the eighth inning.

Wheeler worked the first seven innings for the Knights and did well. C. Shaw was the next pitcher for them and the Odd Fellows found him easier to hit. The next pitcher for the Knights was H. Shaw, who came in to pitch with two men on bases and one out, in the tenth. He passed the first man but struck out the next two.

Cecil Tyler a little eight years old boy of East Waterford visited Norway Saturday. He had captured a large green worm, four and a half inches long and nearly an inch in diameter, and brought him in a box to town. He was a pretty worm with blue and green stripes around his legs, little black eyes in red protuberances on his head, two rows of yellow protuberances down his back and blue ones in a row down his sides. The boy found the worm on a cherry tree near the house, and he was trying to imitate George Washington and cut down the tree. They could hear him from the house cutting away steadily and surely. Cecil is feeding the worm well on leaves from the tree and gives him plenty of air in his captivity, but he thinks he will not allow him to go back on the tree and help himself.

Letter to Norway Dry Goods Men.

Norway, Maine.

Dear Sirs: Now, may be, you can't get the goods; if you can, your fortune is made.

Cotton cloth—they call it muslin in some parts—at about the usual price per yard, but wider, twice as wide as some, and better, wears better, keeps white and whole a surprising time in all sorts of wear.

You could sell that cloth for hundreds of miles; there'd be no limit.

A yard goes further; one buys less yards. Wears longer; one buys less often. It always looks right, till worn-out. No one customer buys so much of it, but think of the number of customers!

May be you can't get it in cloth; but you can in paint; Devoe is as if it were wider; a gallon of Devoe's paint; you buy less gallons; you pay for less gallons; as if one paid less for making a garment of that wide cloth—and keeps its fresh look and sheds water till you have forgotten how old it is.

It isn't true in cloth, but it is in paint; the less you pay, the better it is; for the goodness of paint is reckoned by gallons; less gallons, more goodness. Goodness in paint is strength. The stronger a paint, the less gallons it takes for a job and the longer it wears.

New Barn Dedicated.

On Tuesday evening, Aug. 14th, the many friends of U. S. Grant Abbott and mother to the number of more than a hundred assembled at their residence, Horse Hill Farm, the occasion being the dedication of the new barn, which was built in 1905. The master mechanic was H. Dunsford.

It is a large, commodious and well equipped building, seventy-two feet in length, by forty in width, and was well filled with new mown hay. It is connected with the house. Under the whole barn there is a large cellar, the stonework being done by the Gammon brothers, and reflects great credit upon their superior workmanship. The barn is thoroughly built from the foundation to the ridgepole.

The evening was an ideal one. Relatives, friends, neighbors and acquaintances came from distances near and remote to enjoy the festivities. There were present all ages, from the aged pilgrim bowed with her three score years and ten, down to the little infant whose innocent voice was just beginning to lift the name of mama. The barn was brilliantly illuminated with hanging lamps and lanterns. The grounds were in good condition to afford suitable accommodations for the patient waiting host.

There were stump speeches by Prof. Frank and Abbott, which held the audience spellbound. The clog dance by Messrs. Frank and Bumpus was heartily enjoyed, the accompaniment being played by Prof. Abbott. There were numerous and various games played, such as "Tucker," when John Lamb led the march, "Chase the Squirrel" and "The Needle's Eye," interspersed with selections from the graphophone by Spaulding Abbott and others.

Some few of the guests went home at a seasonable hour, but the majority stayed till the wee small hours of the morning, and some stayed all night under the hospitable roof. The company all declared they had spent a most enjoyable evening and hoped at some future date to meet there again.

Maine Rifle Team Holds New England Championship.

The Maine Woods says:—Norway's crack rifle team holds the Gov. Hill trophy and Co. D's record for shooting at Sea Girt and Wakefield makes them the champion company of New England. Capt. J. Valde Nash has issued a challenge of the 40 men of Norway to a team selected from the Portland battalion of four companies, naval reserves, Co. G of Biddeford and Co. M. of Saco.

The work of Co. D dates back for many years and with a remarkable record. At the annual rifle competition at Sanford in 1905 they set up a new mark for military riflemen of the State. In a seven-men, seven-shot match at 200 and 500 yards they rolled up a score that totaled 10 points better than centers.

At that time Sergeant Nash made a record that is exceptional and with scarcely a parallel in any match of any kind, his sighting shot and all ten counting shots being bullseyes, total 50.

In the snuff match at 300 and 600 yards at Wakefield, Mass., Sgt. Nash had the honor to finish in seventh place in the match, which was a signal achievement, considering the fact that there were over 600 contestants.

Co. D has always been the pride of Norway. Its officers have always been Norway men of the highest standing. Gov. Beals is an example of this. The Rebellion, 1812, and even in the early years of boundary trouble in their own State.

By Nov. 10, 1905 Co. D has made a record of 19 experts, two sharpshooters and 80 marksmen.

Leon Berry and Lee W. Templeton, the pencil pusher of the Advertiser, enjoyed a day at Mr. Berry's home at West Paris Sunday. The tourmaline mine at Mount Mica is an interesting place. It has not been worked to a great extent yet but a large quantity of top rock has been removed and specimens of various kinds of quartz were obtained.

David F. Noyes.

David Franklin Noyes died in Lewiston, Aug. 19, at the age of 89 years, 6 months and 19 days. Mr. Noyes suffered a stroke of paralysis some years ago and has been an invalid since.

He was born in Norway Jan. 11, 1817, the son of Ward and Clarissa (Wood) Noyes. The father was born in Andover, Mass., 1772, and came to Norway in 1800. He was a carpenter by trade.

He died April 23, 1832. The mother was born in Andover, Mass., in 1776 and died in Norway in 1840.

David F. Noyes was one of eleven children, and the last one of the family to survive. He was a successful school teacher and a postmaster in Norway village in the fifties. He was a druggist and had a drug store in the store of the Old Noyes Block, corner of Main and Desiring streets. A. Oscar Noyes learned the drug business of him.

Mr. Noyes went to Lewiston about 1850. He engaged in the manufacturing of leather cards for cloth for use in cotton mills. Later he invented and patented a dry for wood. This patent has been owned for years by H. J. Morton of Chicago, formerly of Norway, and it has made a fortune for him. Mr. Noyes has been city Marshall in Lewiston.

He was married in 1858 to Emily Smith of Westbrook, who died several years ago, and for years he had made his home with his son Irving, who has an important position with the New England Telephone and Telegraph Co.

They have two daughters survive him, Mrs. Ida Look of Dover, N. H., and Mrs. Lizzie Gould of Revere, Mass. The funeral was at the home of his son on Sylvan avenue, Tuesday, at 9 a. m., the burial at Westbrook by the side of his wife.

There will be no service at the Methodist church next Sunday.

The little daughter of Dr. H. L. Bartlett was hit by a passing team, Friday, and knocked down. Fortunately the child was not injured.

Ralph Harriman was among the party who went to Old Orchard, Sunday. On the return he lost his hat which he had purchased the night before.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Record, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Record and Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Record are taking a week's outing at Dooley on the shore of Lake Thompson, Oxford.

John Hayes and son, Ernest, are enjoying a fishing trip on Wild River. They left on Thursday for a two weeks' trip. This is the first vacation Mr. Hayes has enjoyed for 20 years.

An interesting sight at Hill is the Whale Rib post and the front taken from the pulpit of the first Baptist church built in Paris in 1803 which stand near the road in front of the residence of J. H. Rawson.

The New Spring House.

Those who have visited Poland Springs the present year, or even last season, could not but be interested in the new spring and bottling houses that are being erected by the Rickers over and near their famous spring. These buildings of brick, stone and marble, when completed, will cost over $100,000.

The exterior design of both buildings is in Spanish architecture. The walls are of hydraulic pressed, mottled gray fire-brick. The roofs are covered with dark glazed, green mission tile. The frames are entirely of steel.

Directly beneath the roof of the tower, which rises 80 feet above the ground, are openings through which air is drawn to ventilate the bottling. After passing through cotton filters, the air enters directly beneath the ceiling of the room and is exhausted through openings near the floor, thus insuring perfect circulation of pure air.

The floor, walls and ceiling of the bottling are of Carrara sanitary glass, and inlaid in richness, resembling in color the famous marble of Italy. This is very hard, impervious to moisture and may be kept absolutely clean by rinsing.

The east room of this building is the public room, finished in Tyrolean style. The vaulted ceiling is of a single sheet of fine French plate glass, which entirely fills one side of this room, the whole process of bottling. The finishing of this room is in contrast with the others. The floor is of dull green Gruby tile, the ceiling dark oak, and from the massive beams hang hand wrought copper electroliers.

The spring building proper has a more ornate appearance than the bottling house, with its copper dome, cornice and wrought iron work. Its interior will consist of two rooms, the upper of a curved glass screen set in a high, domed iron frame. The spring room will be finished in Carrara glass, while the public room is elaborately finished in genuine Italian Pavanezzo marble.

The columns here are single monoliths surmounted by carved Ionic capitals of the same material. The floor is marble mosaic decorated in the center with a large coat of arms of the Rickers family. The vaulted ceiling is of imported cement and is pierced with the center by three beautiful stained glass windows.

The design, material and workmanship, represent careful study and has resulted in complete high class, fire proof, sanitary structures, dignified and monumental.

A NATION OF CRIPPLES, RHEUMATISM BEYOND CONTROL

The Only Hope to Rheumatic Sufferers is Urio-O Treatment.

If rheumatism continues to spread as it has in the past few years, it would seem as though we would before long become a nation of cripples. The terrible destructiveness of this disease is apparent on every side. Almost nine out of ten of the cripples one meets had their affliction brought on by rheumatism. How many thousands more there are that are hopelessly bed-ridden and whom we never see, is a matter of course. Rheumatism is a disease that never cures itself and if neglected, is bound to grow worse rather than better. If you ever have any twinges of rheumatism go to Noyes' drug store right here in Norway and get a bottle of Urio-O, the wonderful new Rheumatic Specific. It will cure you and it is the only treatment in the world that will cure you permanently and thoroughly. Urio-O cures by its direct action on the muscles, blood and kidneys. It seeks out and drives it from the system and it is only a treatment of such a nature that can ever cure rheumatism. Limbs and joints are only served to drive it from one spot to another. They never cure rheumatism, because it is primarily a blood disease, and until the blood is cleared from the person, a cure cannot take place. There never was a case of rheumatism that Urio-O could not cure and you should not put off taking it because it is in the end by far the cheapest method. You can test Urio-O free of charge if you wish. Just cut out this advertisement and send it to Noyes' Drug Co., 200 Broadway, N. Y., and state that you never use Urio-O and would like to try it. They will send you a free sample which you can try and test free of charge.

Legal Control of Automobiles.

It is no doubt true that the abuse of anything should not be urged as an argument against its proper and legitimate use. A good and right thing may be abused and become a public and personal menace, when its proper use would only benefit without injury to the public. When, however, the reckless employment of any force results in such a percentage of destruction as characterizes the selfish rush of those exclusive luxuries of locomotion, the automobile, that great mass of humanity somewhat indignantly called the public, has a just cause for inquiring into its individual and general rights.

The possession of an automobile and its proper use for pleasure or profit, with a due regard for the safety of others, is a right which no one seeks to deny, but when some shallow minded person seeks to advertise his advent to attention by the unearthy blare of his warning note to the common herd to get out of his royal path then, let us ask in all fairness, and in the exercise of self-preservation which is nature's first duty to seek the common welfare by the enactment of laws with teeth, and a great popular demand for their prompt and impartial execution in the interests of humanity at large.

In saying this we have no disposition to assume that the automobile has no right for its being, or that having an existence it should be abolished. We only contend, what experience has demonstrated all over the land, that it should be placed under regulations at least as impartial and inflexible as those which control the locomotion of the trolley car and the traffic team. There is a question if the penalty for speeding or carelessness on the common highway should not be imprisonment instead of fine, and let it be enacted without fear or favor from the owner of the automobile and not, as a writer in one of the daily newspapers expresses it, from "that pitiful travesty of justice of a nominal fine of the chauffeur, who knows that his fine will be paid for him as well as he knows that he will lose his job if he obeys the law."

The New York Herald uses strong language, when, in speaking of this subject it says: "No reasonable automobilist can take exception to the demand—now fortunately being adopted by magistrates—that the penalty for deliberate law breaking should be imprisonment, not mere fine, while the owner of the offending machine and not the irresponsible chauffeur should be held to accountability."

When automobile transit is placed under some legal control at this time, the public highways will be freed from a menace which now renders them mere death traps instead of places of ordinary public safety to all who have the right to use them.

The man who went out to milk and sat down on a boulder in the middle of the pasture and waited for the cow to back up, was a brother to the man who kept a store and wouldn't advance because he reasoned that the purchaser of public would back up to his place of business when it wanted something.

In Drowning Cases.

"I have no doubt that lives are lost in drowning accidents," said a physician "for the simple reason that efforts at resuscitation after the recovery of the body are not continued long enough and those who attempt to bring back consciousness do not continue long enough at the work and give the person up for dead too soon. A good rule to follow is to keep working until you are sure the patient is dead and then work as much longer."

In view of large number of drowning accidents which happen every year in the bays, rivers, streams and lakes of Maine from the overturning of canoes, boats and while bathing, the people should know how to proceed in a drowning accident and to realize that persons apparently dead from drowning are often brought to life, even though they have been in the water for a long time.

The length of time a person may stay in the water and be brought back to life again has never been determined. In some cases people drown after being in the water two or three minutes and in times that number and still have been brought back to life by persistent effort.

First for all, the water should be expelled from the lungs of the unconscious person and efforts made to induce breathing. There are many methods of doing this, but in the main the lower part of the body should be kept slightly elevated to allow the head and shoulders to remain downward to favor the draining of water from the lungs and then efforts immediately made to restore breathing.

The application of harshness, smelling salts or snuff to the nostrils, tickling the throat with a feather, dashing hot or cold water alternately on the chest and face and vigorous friction of the upper part of the body to produce warmth are of value as are also the wiping and cleansing of the mouth. In case these preliminary efforts fail artificial respiration should be resorted to and continued for a long time, several hours if needed. A common method, which is rightly practiced is often efficacious, is to lay the person flat on the back; then kneeling behind the head grasp the arms near the elbows and raise them upward and backward to their full length behind the head pulling gently at the end of the movement. Then return the arms to the patient's side, pressing hard with the arms themselves on the chest and pit of the stomach. The upward movement expands the lungs so that air may enter and the pressing contracts them expelling the air. This sets up an artificial respiration which will bring the person around if anything will.

It should be remembered that it is of first importance to have the air passage to the lungs free. All mucus and froth should be wiped from the mouth with the nose and the tongue must be kept from falling back into the throat and plugging it.

A person unconscious, lying on his back, is most likely to swallow his tongue, effectively closing the throat against the passage of air. If a doctor is present he will use tongue forceps if he has them. If there is no doctor a needle and thread passed through the tongue's tip and held or fastened will serve the purpose. If there is no needle and thread nearby heroic means must be used. Nearly everybody carries a pen knife and a lead pencil. Take the small blade of the knife and wipe it as clean as possible, stick it through the tongue near the tip and push the pencil through the slit. The pencil, resting against the lips, will keep the tongue out and at the same time stop the bleeding from the cut.

This seems cruel perhaps, but it is a very little thing compared with the life of a man, which may well depend upon this prompt, crude but necessary and effective measure.

According to some authorities the patient should be kept still face downward and something, as a coat or other garment, put under the chest forces the air out, then turning the body gently over on one side and back on its face again, doing this about 15 times a minute, the air in the lungs will excite breathing. The effort should be assisted between each turn of the body by brisk uniform pressure between and below the shoulder blades.

There are other methods but these are common ones and in addition to the rules laid down, the exercise of common sense in attempting to make artificial respiration will go a long way toward bringing back the patient from apparent death.

The fact that a boy who had been in the water 23 minutes was brought back to life, as a result of persistent effort on the part of those who rescued him, shows the necessity of keeping at work in such cases until the last possible spark of hope has been extinguished. It is true that persons submerged four or five minutes are not usually restored, but many cases are on record in which this result has been accomplished after the patient has been under water for 20 minutes or even half an hour.

There is no difficulty in learning what to do for those apparently drowned. The vital point is the necessity of continuing the movements for the restoration of the breathing, and such movements should be continued much longer than is usually the case. One authority declares that they should be continued for not less than two hours if breathing has not previously been restored, and a case is referred to where the efforts succeeded after they had been continued for an hour and 45 minutes.

Drownings are so numerous that this point should never be lost sight of by those who assist in getting a body from the water. While it is possible that the patient may be dead after a minute or two under water, it is also possible that the patient can be brought back to life, and even though submerged for 30 or 40 minutes, provided the efforts to induce breathing are patiently persisted in after the water has been removed from the lungs. One never can tell when he has the exceptional case under treatment, and, therefore, he should not give up until the limit of possibility is reached.

I fear the centralization of big industries in the hands of five or six men will prove a big mistake. When half a dozen men control the business and financial policy of a great industry a single error of judgment will plunge the whole nation into financial loss and ruin.

Securities have been made in great quantities and sold at high prices on the idea that economies to be effected by centralization of control will give them the arbitrary values which have been placed upon them. This theory will be exploded sooner or later, for there will always be competition. When the crash comes it will be a national disaster.

Camera Mightier Than Rifle.

A visitor to the Maine woods, who has become so deeply in love with their attractions that he has invested a large amount in a delightful log cabin home "way up in Maine," has been for years an enthusiastic camera artist.
His love for the woods is just as keen, if not keener; his devotion to the chase is just as strong, and perhaps stronger since there is no afterward of regret in the dying struggles of the wounded game; and the results to his health are as good and far-reaching as though he had tasted of the juicy steaks that a few short hours before, had pulsed and thrilled with life in the form of big game.

Yet in camera success there is none of the bitterness of regret in victory; there is no taking of life, while home, den or office, receives adornment far nobler than the dead and useless antlers or head stuffed in the semblance of life; the actual photograph of the game in its native haunts, with its wild-eyed timidity, its strange blending of curiosity and fear.

Skilful as one must be to successfully follow and kill his quarry, his is but a child's play compared with the skill to be drawn upon in the would-be secure photographs of game in all its original beauty, in the haunts where it feels at home, and where it is provided by Nature with those instincts of wariness and cunning that enable it to avoid its enemies, even its arch-enemy, Man, provided he does not with him that long-reaching, death-dealing weapon, the firearm that can outdistance the fleetest of game. Well does he write the editor: "Vastly more skill is required than with the rifle. To press the button is more than to pull the trigger. A fine enlargement of a moose or a deer taken with the camera exceeds the antlered trophy of a pot shot. Let those that are skeptical try both and then say which requires the greater skill and knowledge of the habits of big game."

Free Scholarships in Nurse Training.

The Philadelphia School for Nurses has purchased large properties at 2219, 25 Obsolete Street, Philadelphia, and will extend the benefits of the Free Course in Nursing to young women of every rural community and of the smaller towns and cities throughout the entire country.
The Course is two years, but may be shortened to eighteen months by six months' reading and study at home.
The School provides room, board, nurse uniforms, gives full instruction, and pays the student's fare home at the end of the Course.

A special short course is provided for those who cannot spend two years in the study but who wish to quickly prepare themselves for self-support.
The object of those who are providing the funds for this work is to ultimately extend the benefits of skilled nursing to every village and township in the land.

Nearly 200 Free Scholarships will be available this year.

Oxford County Universalist Association.

The Oxford Universalist association held its annual meeting in Dearborn's Grove at Bryant's Pond, last week. Some three hundred persons attended.

Services were opened at 11 a. m., with prayer, singing and scriptural readings, followed by a sermon by the Rev. C. R. Tenney, of Auburn. From 12 to 1.30 a picnic dinner with hot coffee was served. In the afternoon addresses were delivered by the Rev. C. A. Kiekerbocker of Paris Hill, by the Rev. W. J. Taylor of Lewiston, and L. H. MacDuff of West Paris. The Rev. F. E. Barton of Bethel, also spoke. Throughout the services excellent music was rendered by a choir.

No finer spot for outdoor meetings exists in Oxford county than Dearborn's Grove, beautifully situated on the edge of Lake Christopher. In the center of the grove is a large natural depression or amphitheatre, at one side of which stands a platform. This platform, provided with an organ and reading desk, and artistically banked with flowers, forms a magnificent natural meeting place. The audience sat on benches or on the grass; and so artfully is the place designed by the hand of nature, that, although the grove is large, everybody was able to hear and see distinctly.

For more than fifty years the Oxford Universalist Association has been holding meetings in Dearborn's Grove.

Old Home Week.

Old Home Week will be but very little observed in Maine this year. The fad seems to have lost its grip, and people have come to the conclusion if they want to come home, there hasn't got to be killed any "faded calves" or unusual display made by the inhabitants.

Former residents think just as dearly of their native town if they return once a year without being heralded by the booming of cannon and lighting of bonfires that they do when they return "home" is sufficient and all the brass bands on earth couldn't make them feel any better. It isn't the display, it's the spirit in which they are welcomed home that counts.

Fishing Prohibition.

Among the latest rules and regulations of the commissioners are the following: "It shall be unlawful to fish for, take, catch or kill any kind of fish at any time in any of the waters of Moose Bog, Barker's lake, Upper and Lower Black ponds, located at the head of the Magalloway river in Oxford county, for a period of three years from July 14th, A. D., 1906.

In addition to the law now in force regarding fishing in the Magalloway river, in the county of Oxford, to wit, that it shall be unlawful to fish in said river, above Asischoos Falls, except with artificial flies, it shall be unlawful for any one person to take, catch or kill more than ten pounds of fish in any one day in said river, from Asischoos Falls to the mouth of Little Magalloway river, and in Upper or Lower Metalluck ponds and in Lincoln pond, all situated in said county of Oxford, for a period of two years from August 1st, 1906.

In addition to the laws now in force regulating fishing in said waters, it shall be unlawful to fish for, take, catch or kill any kind of fish at any time in Bear river, which river is situated in the county of Oxford, down as far as Morse Brook, a tributary to said river, or in Branch brook, also a tributary to said river, and it tributaries down as far as "The Forks" so-called, or in any other tributary to said Bear river, for a period of two years from August 1st, A. D., 1906.—Maine Sportsman.

Legend of the Zulus.

The Zulus account for their origin by a story of a talking elephant who fed upon children. He met a woman laden with an ax and bundle of faggots, accompanied by her child. Seeing the elephant, she guessed his intention, and pleaded: "Spare my child, oh elephant!" The elephant refused. "Then," said the mother, "if this evil must happen, swallow me, too, oh elephant!" So the elephant swallowed her and her child, and they all ate. As the fire burned, its great heat filled the elephant with pain, and he ran, and ran, and ran, till they felt the thunder of his hoofs racing over hill and valley.

At length, exhausted, he dropped down dead. Using her ax, the mother chopped until she made an opening in the elephant's side. After this, they crept out and became a new nation in a new country.

"Everybody Happy" is the popular catch-word this season.

They yell it at the ball games; they howl it on the trolley cars; it echoes among the mountains; it drowns the cries of the fakirs at the beach resorts. It has not been adopted yet as a campaign slogan.
